

Dying for a Known Lie?

Men do sometimes die for a lie.
But only when they believe it to be true!

Men do not die for what they KNOW (or even suspect) to be a lie!

The Big Question

Would the men who knew Jesus personally and spent three years of their lives with Him and watched Him crucified, have been willing to DIE rather than simply deny that He was risen from the dead? Even if they couldn't find His body? Even if they had heard rumors that He was alive? (Would you be willing to die for a missing body and a rumor?)
